Professor Laetitia Rispel holds a South African Research Chair, entitled Research on the Health Workforce for Equity and Quality and is Professor of Public Health at the University of Witwatersrand in Johannesburg, South Africa. She formerly served as Head of the Wits School of Public Health (2012-2017) and Head of the Gauteng Department of Health (2001–2006). Her research spans human resources for health, quality of care, performance of the health care system; and the intersection of these with the social determinants of health. She chaired the recent Ministerial Task Team responsible for the development of the 2030 National Human Resources for Health Strategy.
