‘You have to pay with your body’: women’s experiences of sexual assault and rape at the Lesotho–South Africa ‘paqamagates’

Munyaradzi Mushonga (PhD)

Munyaradzi Mushonga is a Senior Lecturer and Programme Director for Africa Studies in the Centre for Gender and Africa Studies at the University of the Free State, RSA. He holds a PhD in Africa Studies. He is an interdisciplinary researcher whose work is grounded in postcolonial and decolonial theoretical perspectives. He enjoys operating at the margins.

He is currently involved in two externally and two internally funded research projects namely (a) The Border, the ‘Bantustans’ and the Rainbow Nation: a contradictory mix of discreteness and continuity in the oral histories of transnational communities in the borderlands of Lesotho/South Africa; (b) The Humanities and the decolonial challenge: a comparative study of the University of the Free State, University of the Western Cape, and Sol Plaatje University © The Border, the ‘Bantustan’ and the Rainbow Nation: a contradictory mix of discreteness and continuity in the oral histories of the Joe Gqabi District in the Eastern Cape Province of South Africa; and (d) Re-humanizing the medical profession: a case for accessible vocabularies for maternal and child health, infectious and non-communicable diseases in South Africa.
