

Department of English Honours Courses: 2021 Bloemfontein Campus

Students are required to complete 128 credits selected from the modules below, with ENGL6808, ENGL6814 and ENGL6824 as compulsory modules for students majoring in Literary and Cultural Studies. ENGL 6808, ENGA 6814 and ENGA 6824 are compulsory, in turn, for students majoring in Applied Language Studies.

Adding to the above, students are expected to select an additional 64 credits from the list of 16 credit elective modules below. The department limits the number of options for any given year. The course offerings for 2021 will be finalised in February 2021. Detailed course outlines will be provided by course lecturers.

ENGL 6808 RESEARCH METHODOLOGY AND RESEARCH ESSAY

Each essay to be marked by two members of staff.

32 credits

The purpose of this course, which all students in the English Honours must complete, is to introduce students to the concept of research as it functions in the field of English Literary and Cultural Studies, as well as Linguistics. The course is divided into two sections: the first addresses some of the methodological questions that inform research in a variety of areas in English studies; the second is directed towards any research involved in the writing of the long essay, which students are required to submit at the end of the year.

At the end of the first part of the course, students should be able to:

- (i) understand the basic processes of research in the fields of Literary and/or Cultural Studies and/or Linguistics Studies in English;
- (ii) formulate a research topic appropriate for Honours or Master's use;
- (iii) choose a methodological approach appropriate to your chosen topic of research;
- (iv) draw up a well-grounded research proposal outlining your intended research, and;
- (iv) produce a convincing, well-written research document such as a long essay, mini-thesis, dissertation, or thesis based on this research proposal.

Research Essay: Various supervisors

An individually supervised essay on a topic formulated in consultation with a supervisor approved by the Head of Department. The essay will be assessed and moderated. Deadlines must be strictly adhered to; late submission will incur penalties and might result in failure to obtain the Honours degree.

Deadlines for Research Essay:

1. April 16th: proposal draft due.
2. April 23th: feedback from supervisor.
3. May 11th: final proposal due.
4. 20th July: first 20 pages due.
5. September 7th: second 20 pages due.
6. October 5th: full draft of mini-thesis due.

7. Nov 2nd: Final mini-thesis due.

Please note: These deadlines are subject to revision pending 2021 UFS Calendar changes. Please also note that students who do not meet deadlines will not be entitled to detailed feedback from their supervisors on section drafts. No feedback will be offered in November unless students have met all their deadlines throughout the year.

FIRST SEMESTER: COMPULSORY OPTIONS

ENGL6814 LITERARY THEORY: THE BEGINNINGS

Dr. Aghoghovwia (aghoghovwiapo@ufs.ac.za)

Dr. De Villiers (devilliersar@ufs.ac.za)

16 credits

ENGL6814 is an introductory course designed to expose post-graduate students to the rudiments of a key area of literary and cultural discourse. The course provides an overview of the major theoretical trends that have shaped the critical reception and production of literary texts both prior to and since the twentieth century. Theoretical frameworks considered in any given year might include Classical, Medieval and Early Modern Literary Theory; Romanticism; Formalism; Marxism; Phenomenology; as well as Structuralist and Post-Structuralist Theory. The theoretical discourses studied in this course focus on the fundamental assumptions and premises of various theoretical schools, with a view to establishing a platform for the study of later theoretical constructs.

OR, if you are an applied language studies major:

ENGA6814 AN INTRODUCTION TO APPLIED LINGUISTIC THEORY IN THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE CLASSROOM

Dr Brokensha (broksha@ufs.ac.za)

16 credits

ENGA6814 is aimed at introducing students to how applied linguistic theory and applied linguistic research may be employed to not only illuminate but also solve problems in the English language classroom. At the end of this module, given due engagement with the study material and assessments, the student will be able to:

- classify and critically evaluate components of the English language, demonstrating their understanding that it is an integrative system;
- apply knowledge of phonology, morphology, syntax, semantics, pragmatics, orthography, and vocabulary to help ESOL learners develop aural/oral, reading, and writing skills;
- understand, assess, and apply rhetorical structures in the context of ESOL learning; and
- demonstrate proficiency in English with a view to serving as a good language model for ESOL learners. [ESOL: English for Speakers of Other Languages]

SECOND SEMESTER: COMPULSORY OPTIONS

ENGL6824 CONTEMPORARY CRITICAL THEORY

Lecturers:

Dr Aghoghovwia (aghoghovwiapo@ufs.ac.za)

Dr Brooks (brooksm@ufs.ac.za)

Dr Conradie (conradiems@ufs.ac.za)

Prof Manase (Manasel@ufs.ac.za)

16 credits

Building on the discussion of literary theory in ENGL6814, this course considers some of the additional debates that have animated cultural and critical theory during the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. Specifically, the course introduces students to methods of critically analysing a wide variety of texts – including literature, films and other media – in order to facilitate a rigorous questioning of our roles as citizens of our contemporary world and as critical interpreters of past and present contexts. This part of the course reflects the shift that Departments of English around the world have made in recent years from traditional methods of literary analysis to the study of a range of cultural texts and practices through the lens of contemporary critical theory, including theories of gender and sexuality, critical race theory, psychoanalysis, affect theory and postcolonial theory. The primary objectives of this course are to equip students with the theoretical tools required to bridge the gap between the cultural texts that we read and the worlds that we inhabit; to expose the links between knowledge and power; and to draw on the lessons of history so that we might better understand the present and imagine more equitable futures. The course asks of students to cross disciplinary boundaries, to invest in a study of lived political and social contexts, and to commit to the project of social and epistemic transformation.

OR, if you are an applied language studies major:

ENGA6824
APPLIED LINGUISTICS FROM GLOBAL SOUTH PERSPECTIVES

Dr Brokensha (broksha@ufs.ac.za)

16 credits

ENGA6824 is aimed at sensitising students to the fact that scholars working in the area of Applied Language Studies and English Language Teaching need to expand their epistemological repertoires in such a way that they also take perspectives from the Global South into account. At the end of this module, given due engagement with the study material and assessments, the student will be able to: critically evaluate the latest challenges and innovations in applied linguistics and English language teaching from the perspective of the Global South; and apply Southern theories when it comes to, amongst other things, language learning, literacy and diversity, and language rights in the English language classroom.

FIRST SEMESTER: ELECTIVE COURSE OPTIONS

ENGA6834
CONTEMPORARY POETRY

Dr. Brooks (brooksm@ufs.ac.za)

16 credits

This course presents an intensive study of a selection of major contemporary poets, with special attention to questions of influence, interrelations, and diverse poetic practices. The study of these poets also aims to provide students with a thorough knowledge of the characteristic techniques, concerns and major practitioners of contemporary poetry. Apart from an in-depth study of the theoretical consideration of modernity and modernism, diverse methods of literary criticism are employed, including historical, cultural, biographical, social, political and gender criticism.

ENGR6814 (CAPITA SELECTA)
ARCHIVES OF FEMINIST RAGE AND LOVE IN SOUTH AFRICAN LITERATURE AND CULTURE

Prof Helene Strauss (StraussHJ@ufs.ac.za)

16 credits

This is the time of feminist rage. Feminist rage is as legitimate as feminist love.

To love is to give and to take.

Pumla Dineo Gqola

Chimamanda Ngozi Adichie

This course conceives of a selection of South African creative cultural texts as archives of feminist feeling. Inspired by inventive new forms of feminist organising such as the #RememberKhwezi, #RURreferenceList and #RapeAtAzania protests, as well as a number of other recent examples of visual, literary and aesthetic feminist activism, the aims of the course are twofold: (1) to map some of the intellectual precedents to the contemporary expression of Black feminist rage and love in creative cultural production and activism alike, and (2) to read a range of literary and visual cultural South African texts as affective archives. To this end, the course shifts the focus from the archive as a fixed, institutional site of knowledge retrieval toward what Jacques Derrida might call its feverish qualities – those absences and omissions that are both produced by and paradoxically constitutive of the archive. This is an archive, as theorists such as Elspeth Brown and Thy Phu have shown, that is particularly amenable to being read for its affective wiring. Works by theorists, artists and creative cultural workers such as Audre Lorde, Sara Ahmed, Ama Ata Aidoo, Winnie Madikizela-Mandela, Laretta Ngcobo, Pumla Dineo Gqola, Koleka Putuma, Sisonke Msimang, Simamkele Dlakavu, Panashe Chigumadzi, Redi Tlhabi, Lwandile Fikeni, Leigh-Ann Naidoo, Stella Nyanzi, Sethembile Msezane, Pregs Govender, Barbara Boswell, Kagiso Lesego Molepe, Zanele Muholi, Zethu Matebeni, Keguro Macharia and Zubeida Jaffer will be analysed.

ENGN 6814 A DECOLONIAL PERSPECTIVE ON THE TEACHING OF ENGLISH

Dr Du Plessis (duplessiscl@ufs.ac.za)

16 credits

This course is aimed at exploring current views on teaching English as an international language within a decolonised language curriculum. The module introduces students to theories of language acquisition and communicative competence and how these find application in language courses and assessment artefacts designed for use in South African contexts. As part of the investigative journey, important principles that guide the conceptualisation and design of language courses are discussed, as well as the notion of assessment as learning. On completion of the course, students should have a comprehensive understanding of how contemporary views of language influence teaching methodologies and curriculum content.

ENGP6814 DISCOURSE AND DIFFERENCE

Dr Conradie (conradiems@ufs.ac.za)

16 credits

This course requires a basic understanding of linkages between language, identity and society. It guides students through a range of theoretical perspectives on the role that discourse plays in shaping, questioning and/or constraining our understanding of difference, particularly along lines of racialisation. The course specifically engages with discourse-based studies and theoretical works, with the aim of enabling students to analyse the discursive construction of difference and to interrogate the ideologies underpinning these discourses.

ENGQ6814 DIGITAL MEDIA RESEARCH

Dr Brokensha (conradiems@ufs.ac.za)

16 credits

Accommodating students who are interested in either applied linguistics or in language teaching, the focus in this course is on exploring interactions that take place through digital technologies which include social media, e-learning platforms, cell phones, email, and the Web. The main objective of the course is to give students the opportunity to learn about and then apply methods of content analysis to websites of their choice. Essentially what this means is that each week, students are exposed to a new empirical analytical method which they then employ to carry out their own website analysis. Each analysis takes the form of a written research paper. The empirical methods of content analysis explored and applied include, but are not limited to, feature, image, theme, video, and language analysis. When it comes to social media, content analyses are conducted in the context of uncivil discourse generated by online users as well as in the context of blame avoidance on the part of online users. As far as e-learning platforms are concerned, content analyses are carried out against the background of theories of knowledge construction.

There is currently a paucity of content-analytic studies carried out in (South) African online spaces. This is where students can make a unique contribution!

SECOND SEMESTER: ELECTIVE COURSE OPTIONS

ENGE6844

CONTEMPORARY LITERARY IDENTITIES: RACE, GENDER AND THE SELF

Dr. Brooks (brooksm@ufs.ac.za)

16 credits

This course comprises an extensive study of the representation of contemporary identity in modern English literature. Through the study of a selection of poems, prose essays, short stories, films and novels, the course explores the intersecting relationship between issues of race, gender and the self. Relevant critical readings will be set alongside fictional texts to illuminate how these texts respond to and further ideas of contemporary identity.

On successful completion of the course, students will have obtained extensive knowledge of current literary theory relating to aspects of contemporary identity; be able to study and critically analyse literature in specific historic, literary and social contexts; be able to introduce pertinent theoretical contexts and debates in their oral and written presentations; be able to demonstrate their understanding of the complex aspects of contemporary identity and how issues of sexuality and gender, race and ethnicity and concepts of the human and selfhood intersect; and demonstrate the ability to conceptualise, structure and deliver academic seminars and essays.

ENGI6844

INTRA-AFRICAN MOBILITIES: CONTEMPORARY AFRICAN CULTURAL PRODUCTION

Prof. Manase (manasei@ufs.ac.za)

16 credits

This course examines contemporary African cultural texts that explore the intra-African circulation of ideas and people from the time of the Trans-Atlantic slave trade to the present. Africa has always been marked by mobilities and displacements, whether as a result of the slave trade, colonialism, or other intra- African wars, struggles and exchanges. The pressures brought by recent processes of globalisation, such as the implementation of structural adjustment programs and the liberalisation of economies, have in turn led to new migrations and dislocations. These movements have important cultural implications. Cultural texts, as conveyors of the interests and identities of Africa's divergent social groups, offer a unique perspective on the concerns that emerge at these intersections of power, nationality, race, gender, sexuality and ethnicity. In this course we will try to identify some of these concerns. What specific contributions do African narratives of mobility and migration make to discourses of internationalism, diaspora and globalisation?

ENGN 6824

MULTIMODAL PERSPECTIVES IN ENGLISH SECOND LANGUAGE LEARNING AND TEACHING

Dr Els (elsca@ufs.ac.za)

16 credits

The course delves into multimodal aspects of language presentation and usage, and its main focus is on the teaching of English as a First Additional Language / Foreign Language. The concept of multimodality is not necessarily limited to digital modes per se, but may include a conglomeration of creative modes that are expedient to a language classroom. The course is meant to serve as an inspiration for students interested in the teaching profession and is not intended to be an in-depth, comprehensive analysis of language or teaching, although students are expected to apply practical aspects related to the teaching of language and literature. Various modes that students can expect to encounter are music and film and students are introduced, for instance, to the connections between language acquisition, music and cognition. Multimodality influences ways of listening to the world of language, music and people, and the creativity of the concept itself is explored.

ENGR6824 (CAPITA SELECTA)
THE LITERATURE OF EXTRACTION: PEOPLE, POWER, AND 'THE MARKET'

Dr. Aghoghovwia (aghoghovwiapo@ufs.ac.za)

16 credits

This course is a heuristic study of literary and film depictions of resource extraction and the power regimes that govern it. The seminar will define extraction as loosely as the term can possibly permit in order to think of the senses that literature writ large makes of it. We will read across geographies in the Global South and the various forms that extraction takes in any given literary and historical context.

The readings for this course will be drawn from:

Amitav Ghosh (India), Sea of Poppies
Arundhati Roy (India), Walking with the Comrades
Okey Ndibe (Nigeria), Foreign Gods Inc.
Karen Jayes (South Africa), For the Mercy of Water
Even the Rain (Bolivia). Dir. Iciar Bollain.

ENGC6824
MODERNISM'S SHAKESPEARE

Dr Rick de Villiers (DeVilliersAR@ufs.ac.za)

16 credits

This course explores Shakespeare's influence on major Modernist authors and, conversely, the ways in which these authors have shaped our understanding of Shakespeare today. Reading selected works of Shakespeare alongside key Modernist texts, it aims to situate and theorise modernist intertextuality in relation to the Shakespearean canon. The course exposes students to a range of genres, both within Shakespeare's oeuvre (tragedy, comedy, romance, and the sonnet) and within the Modernist canon (the novel, poetry, literary criticism, and drama). By the end of the course, students should be able to recognize the influence of "Modernism's Shakespeare" on issues such as canon formation, postcolonialism, intertextuality, feminism, and the politics of language.

ENGF6864
THE LITERARY AND CULTURAL POLITICS OF ABUSE

Dr. Brooks (e-mail: brooksm@ufs.ac.za)

16 credits

This course is based on a reading of Ovid's archetypal rape narrative in Metamorphoses and focuses on the influence of this text in terms of the introduction and presentation of women abuse and trauma in modern literary texts in English. A range of important texts from the critical perspective of trauma theory will be examined, focusing in particular on literary, historical, political, theoretical, psychoanalytic and feminist aspects. Special attention will be given to the nature of cultural and collective memory, the relationship between violence and memory, trauma and vengeance, blood, madness, rape and corrective rape, and mourning and melancholia.