

Rufus Gouws is Professor in Afrikaans Linguistics in the Department of Afrikaans and Dutch at the University of Stellenbosch where he also coordinates the postgraduate programme for Lexicography. This programme attracts students from different countries in Africa. His main field of interest is theoretical lexicography and he has published extensively, focusing on bilingual lexicography, multilingualism and multiculturalism in dictionaries, dictionary structures, dictionary functions, the general theory of lexicography and learners' lexicography. He has co-authored a number of dictionaries, including the leading monolingual Afrikaans dictionary Handwoordeboek van die Afrikaanse Taal and the international Dictionary of Lexicography and Dictionary Research.