

Postdoctoral Fellowship: Global Mental Health

The African Academy of Sciences offers a Fellowship Programme to strengthen capacity for global mental health implementation science in South/Central Asia and/or East Africa. The Fellowship Programme is a joint initiative of the Aga Khan University's Brain and Mind Institute and the Department of Global Health and Social Medicine, Harvard Medical School. The programme supports postdoctoral research fellows in conducting implementation science research designed to translate prevention, assessment, and treatment interventions to specific settings and vulnerable populations in low- and middle-income countries.

Minimum Qualifications

The Fellowship Programme is open to individuals who have received their PhD or completed their MD degree with a research thesis by 1 December 2024.

Additionally, applicants should have a record of academic achievement (for example, prior peer-reviewed publications), and have demonstrated a commitment to pursuing a career in global mental health research, particularly in service to the geographies served by the Aga Khan University and the Aga Khan Development Network. The Fellowship Programme is open to any qualified candidate.
