

Dr Mathias Alubafi Fubah is a senior research Specialist in the Developmental, Capable, and Ethical State (DCES) Division at the Human Sciences Research Council, and a Research Associate at the Centre for Gender and African Studies at the University of the Free State. His area of interest and expertise is art and museums in Africa, heritage, tourism and more recently ageing in Africa. He recently completed a postgraduate diploma in Education (with distinction) at the University of the Witwatersrand, 2021. One of his most recent publication is a book, co-edited with Anitra Nettleton titled: Exchanging Symbols: Monuments and Memorials in Post-apartheid South Africa (African Sun Media, December, 2020).