Step 2:

See designs, visuals, and mood board for inspiration

C. Making it real

Step 1:

Apply the brand narrative

A. Craft your message and tell your story

Step 1

Find your core message, your sub-messages, and your stories

The core message – this is the leading message that will build the full brand narrative or story for this project/plan/strategy. It is the main message, i.e., an elevator pitch, a one-liner that sums up what is required and why this is important.

Abridged version (the elevator pitch)

The University of the Free State (UFS) creates opportunities and growth through leading, learning and teaching, focused research, and impactful engagement with society. Situated in the heart of South Africa, our character of caring and diversity translates into an outstanding university experience.

Sub-messages – these are supporting messages (three to five) that will unpack the key concepts in the main message with more details.

Words	Quality	Care	Impact	Leading success rate	Highly employable graduates
Key messages	An outstanding university experience	Invested in Ubuntu	Research with industry and social impact	Growth through leading, learning, and teaching	Global best practices in research, theory, and teaching
Sub-messages	Real excellence in education	Invested in success and human happiness	We identify, realise, and unleash potential	National, institutional, and individual achievements	Graduates, thinkers, problem-solvers, and leaders

Stories – for each of the messages (core and sub-messages), list two or three stories that could be told to support the message (qualitative in nature).

- A story told about the quality of a UFS education
- A story told about the impact that we make
- A story told about our caring nature

Each story should contain words from the long brand narrative and then explanations taken from the proof points.

Touch points from the brand narrative	Key messages	Supporting the key message

Step 2

Step 3

Tone of voice

Explaining the difference between the brand narrative and the tone of voice:

The difference
The brand narrative	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A story • The story being told (noun) • Story-telling process
Tone of voice	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Personality of the storyteller • How we speak • How we sound on all channels (social media, packaging, visual, etc.)
Pointers	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A good way to tell if there is distinctive tone of voice is to consider whether your audience would be able to recognise your brand based on just your content, even if your logo didn't appear alongside it. • Or, whether two pieces of content on two different channels sound like they are coming from the same organisation.

Step 5

Audience analysis

The section below focuses on the various UFS stakeholders that have information that can be strategically applied in messaging. It will guide you on how to formulate messages using the brand narrative, along with relevant visual elements through effective channels.

Audience (all levels)	Characteristics	Communication issues identified	Preferred communication methods	What they should think, feel, and do as identified in Part 1, the qualitative section of the brand narrative–building research
Current students Positioned from research as 1/14 importance from stakeholder list.	Sum of registered students (2022) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • 6 050 postgraduate students • 34 833 undergraduate students • 217 occasional staff Location of students <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Bloemfontein Campus (74%) • South Campus (8%) • Qwaqwa Campus (18%) Faculties with most enrolment: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Education • The Humanities • Economic and Management Sciences Home language (Bloemfontein) Sesotho (10%), Afrikaans(8%), English (59%), and isiZulu (6%). Home language (Qwaqwa Campus) English (53%), isiZulu (26%), and Sesotho (17%). Home language (South Campus) English (70%), other languages with a smaller component of speakers include isiZulu, Sesotho, and isiXhosa. Association with the UFS (2022 UNIVERSUM report) The top three attributes students strongly associate the UFS with are a safe campus environment, educational excellence, and a friendly and open environment.	Gaps between the university’s reputation promise (what it wants to be known for), its culture (behaviour), and its image (self-presentation), which collectively build its identity (character).	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Generation Y (50%) prefers fast and clear communication with a definite purpose, delivered visually through the latest technology. • Generation X (30%) also prefers communication to be to-the-point, and responds well to technology. • Baby Boomers (19%) and Traditionalists (1%) are more comfortable with traditional communication channels. Blackboard communication <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • 84% of students use Blackboard to access course material. • 78% use Blackboard to access important information. • 54% use Blackboard to collaborate with other students. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Students should think that the UFS is a really good university. They should see the university and think that the UFS is transforming, responding to changes in society, and trying to meet the needs of society. • Students should feel that they belong at the UFS and that they want to be part of the UFS. They should feel proud to be at the UFS and be associated with the UFS. • Students should apply to the UFS and want to be a part of the UFS as postgraduates as well. • They should be proud and relate that to others to get them to be part of the UFS (word-of-mouth). Students that are here should partake in all the activities and make a difference.

B. The best visuals to grab your audience's attention ... and keep it

Step 1

Visual styles

Examples

The examples below can be used to visually support your writing when using the brand narrative. Using more than one element can strengthen your messages and also keep your audience engaged with your content. Visual elements can further be used to link messages to specific campaigns.

Photography

Using photographic visuals for the brand narrative requires consistent application - a golden thread that runs through all visual applications. Images in the recommended styles should always appear as if they belong to the collective brand narrative photo bank. Visuals of students are the style to use for the brand narrative.

Vector illustrations

Vector illustrations are unique, fun and can be used to communicate a specific message. Vectors can be developed as needed, especially if a photograph will not support your message accurately.

Iconography

Icons are ideal for listing or communicating short points of information. They can save space while still visually supporting a message.

Shapes

Using shapes can bring structure to designs. The shapes below are used to visually support UFS messages.

Polygon graphics

These are very modern designs and can be implemented in various visuals to support content.

Colours

Using strips of colour to support the message brings a colourful element to your message. Strips of colour should always be within the UFS CI guidelines.

Step 2 Design/Visual/Mood boards

International Office

C. Making it real

Step 1

Apply the brand narrative

How to apply the brand narrative to the International Office:

1. Make use of the updated CI with Quality. Impact. Care. incorporated.
2. Integrate the brand narrative tone and key messages in existing content related to the application process. For instance, the website Why Choose Us section could start with “We are all about quality, impact and care, so we will support you holistically.”
3. The short brand narrative to be on the first page of all prospectus documents and Quality. Impact. Care. to be on all documents as part of the letterheads or headers/ footers.
4. Share the testimonial stories directly, after first contact (via email). Have quick links to testimonials on the website at the Apply section. Make sure all editors that edit any copy for the UFS are aware of the new tone of voice and edit accordingly.
